

The Fox and the Goat (based on a fable by Aesop)

One day the Fox fell into a deep well¹ and could not get out.

Then the Fox saw a Goat and shouted : „Hey!“

The Goat looked at the Fox and asked: „What are you doing there?“

The Fox replied: „ Oh, I thought, you would know. There is going to be a great drought², so I jumped down here to stay close to water.“

„Oh“ replied the Goat.

The Fox asked: „Why don't you come down too? There is enough room here for both of us.“

The Goat jumped in the well.

The Fox laughed and jumped on the Goat's back and out of the well.

„Good bye, friend.“ said the Fox and went away.

¹ a deep hole, which contains water

² a long time without rain, the earth dries up